

RUSTIC CHARM

Add a natural element to your architecture with these floating timber beams. The one-of-a-kind timber pieces from Surfaces Material Gallery are salvaged from decades-old barns and can be used as mantels or floating shelves. Similar reclaimed lumber can be used for non-structural ceiling beams to add a rustic architectural element as seen in this children's bunk room by Jones-Keena & Co.

TOP | Surfaces Materials Gallery: Chatham House Lifestyle Gallery, Suite 102-A.

Design by Jones-Keena & Co.
Photo by Beth Singer

SLEEK AND MODERN

Clean lines and smooth surfaces are key elements in modern architecture as seen in this handle-free cabinetry from Scavolini and Rutt HandCrafted Cabinetry. Delinea, a new collection by Scavolini eliminates busy hardware with a 45-degree angle in the profile of the door complete with metal edge band (available in silver, gold, white, black, and more). The metal detail has ridges for easy opening, and a smooth channel behind to match or accent the door color.

Gardner Builders designed this custom entertainment center using flat panel cabinetry from Rutt HandCrafted Cabinetry. The low, linear fireplace is trimmed in contrasting stone tile, adding architectural interest without sacrificing simplicity.

ABOVE | Scavolini: Scavolini Store Detroit, Suite 37.

LEFT | Rutt HandCrafted Cabinetry: Gardner Builders, Suite 106.

