The new owner of this lovely Birmingham home was recently divorced and felt he never had the chance to fully explore his own style. He consulted with Dan Davis Design and discovered that he really wanted a comfortable, eclectic house that was less formal. Principal designers Dan Davis and Paul Johnson were also tasked with reviewing the exterior architectural and landscape plans, which allowed them to incorporate colorful accents and natural finishes both inside and out. No detail was too small; even the annual plant colors and vibrant planters were specified to coordinate with the indoor color schemes. The client has a large collection of stones and semi-precious gems showcased throughout the home, which echo the geological features of the large stones and boulders used outside.
