

With a stroke of genius, the designer raised the pool from the first floor resulting in a stunning infinity effect.

When looking back on her design process for the project, the designer takes a relaxed approach. “Cookie cutter perfection shouldn’t be the goal when decorating your spaces,” she advises. “The house is a product, and the home is a process. You create it with love, care, and personality – you then fill it with memories and experiences.” The owners of this revitalized retreat certainly have a sensational backdrop to fulfill such sentiments.
