

Each of the apartments was designed to showcase their individual personality. “We didn’t want each unit to look the same, or like anything else you could find in the city,” Guidry says. The original concrete floors were repaired and polished to a brilliant shine. “We leaned into the character of the entire building and tried to preserve a lot of those attributes,” Kapadia explains.

Exclusive to this unit, the apartment features the original factory paint giving the space a chic industrial feel.
