FAMILY FUN

In what was technically a formal living room located off the foyer, the Salzeider's wanted to create a recreation space for their teenager who loves ping pong. The room takes on a cozy atmosphere with its rich wood finishes and "color drenching" paint style. "I think it's a cool way to really envelop you in a space—almost like how a blanket wraps around you," she explains. "We wanted this space to connect to the rest of the house, but also feel fun and a little bit different."

Right away, one's eye is drawn to a delightful piece of artwork in the corner of the room. "This picture is very whimsical, and that sums up the family's personality," Rodriguez says. The designer felt that certain areas of the home needed to feel special, and this was one of those areas.
