

Wood slatting adds visual interest to the entrance of the home and conceals the basement door.

AESTHETIC ENTRANCE

“Up in Smoke” by Pablo Fernandez greets the guests from atop the staircase at the entrance of the home. “The door to basement is hidden by attractive wood slatting, and floating lights in the stairwell were selected so that the artwork is unobstructed,” Roby explains. “We also did a stair runner to cozy it up, providing some texture and safety.” An entry to the powder room is to the right of the stairwell, and a barn door hides the first-floor laundry further down the hall.

A floating wall opposite the “Doodle Snoopy” artwork by Mactivo was constructed to accommodate artwork on both sides and creates a hallway entrance to the primary suite. “Throughout the entire process, Jill and Kirsten’s kindness and patience created an atmosphere of comfort that made what could have been a stressful experience, truly enjoyable,” the homeowner explains. “They took the time to understand our vision, preferences, and lifestyle needs, then offered numerous thoughtful options at every decision point. Their dedication to helping us achieve exactly what we envisioned went far above and beyond typical service expectations.”
