Annie Kordas' Art-Filled Colonial Home

Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan

This 1964 colonial home located just steps from Lake St. Clair has 4,000-square feet and features a plethora of original artwork and vintage finds, many with a French influence that pays homage to Annie's previous career as a French teacher. Several of the art pieces throughout the home were crafted by family members, adding a personal touch. The home had great bones and nice finish materials, but needed updating. In addition to redecorating every room, she opened a wall to connect the centrally-located living room with the kitchen. The reconfigured first floor, which includes an adult entertaining space and formal dining room, has a better flow that is perfect for Annie and her active family. The second floor houses the main bedroom suite, a home office, and a bedroom shared by her two young daughters. A lovely new stone fireplace was recently added in the back yard to create an outdoor family room for additional entertaining space when hosting guests.
