Barry Harrison's Century-Old Cottage

Douglas, Michigan

More than 300 panes of glass frame the spectacular curved front porch that wraps around the front of Barry's 1900 classic American Foursquare cottage. The 2,450-square foot home sits on an acre of land, and it retains much of its original character – Barry chose to decorate, not renovate his vacation getaway to create a place to relax and recall simpler times. Barry, an accomplished artist, displays his work throughout the home, including the large red horse sculpture out front, the hand-painted stair runner, and a number of his paintings. His design firm, Art | Harrison Interiors, with business partner Arturo Sanchez, made a number of the custom furnishings seen in the home. The kitchen is mostly original, and includes wooden utensils Barry crafted from wood left from bonfires enjoyed by neighbors and friends. On the first floor, the living room, dining room, porch, and kitchen offer comfortable spots to visit with friends, while the second floor has two roomy bedrooms. To complete the home's vintage appeal, a pair of vintage cars in the garage stand ready for weekend fun.
